

About the Trainer:

Denise Findlay, BSN, RN, is a master trainer and has taught the NCAST Parent-Child Interaction Teaching and Feeding scales for over 30 years. She is an enthusiastic and responsive trainer. Prior to coming to the University of Washington and Parent-Child Relationship Programs (PCRP), Denise worked as Public Health Nurse, serving families, pregnant women, infants, young children, children with special health care needs, and those involved with child welfare services.

Denise is current the Director of Education for PCRP and assists with developing new research-based training programs and products at the University of Washington. Denise, along with Dr. Monica Oxford, edited the Second Edition of both the NCAST PCI Feeding and Teaching manuals. She prepares and mentors certified PCI instructors through the United States, Canada, Australia, Japan, New Zealand, Taiwan, and England. Denise attended Seattle University and completed the University of Massachusetts Boston Napa Infant Parent Mental Health fellowship program, holding a post-graduate certificate in Infant Parent Mental Health.
